AIM6

ENTERED ACCORDING TO ACT OF CONGRESS, IN THE YEAR 1841,
BY ROBERT MILLS,
IN THE CLERK'S OFFICE OF THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE DIS-TRICT OF COLUMBIA.

INTRODUCTORY.

THE author of this little work has been induced to undertake it from its acknowledged utility. Every one having business with the Public Offices, or Capitol, whether stranger or resident, is sensible of the difficulty of locating the different bureaus in their buildings, and more particularly the officers and clerks attached to those bureaus. The nature of the information contained in this work will tend to remove this difficulty, and afford to all the means of identifying both the building and the room occupied by every officer doing business therein.

In connection with a brief description of each executive building, is a diagram plan of the same, with each room numbered, the numbers applying to each floor, consecutively. The officers and clerks of each department being alphabetically arranged, and following in the order of the departments to which they belong, will be easily found, and opposite to their name, in the margin, is the number of the room in the diagram, on first, second, or third floor, as the case may be.

The key to the business rooms in the Capitol is in the numbers and labels over the doors of the several committee rooms; these being given, and their relative locations, as respects the floor and part of the building where they are situated, no difficulty will occur in finding them.

The index at the end of the book will point out at a glance the bureau to which every officer named is attached, by a reference to the page, which gives the number of the room he occupies.

This edition of the work has been brought out in a cheap form, to answer present demands. Should it be well received, a larger and more perfect work will follow at some future period.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

The building occupied by this department is situated on the east side of the President's square, on a line with Fifteenth street; it is built of stone, and fire-proof; extending three hundred and thirty-six feet, with a depth in the centre, including the colonnade in front and portico in the rear, of one hundred and ninety feet. Each floor contains forty-five apartments, or, in the three stories above the basement, one hundred and thirty-five rooms.

The main entrance is on the east, by a double flight of steps. The first, or colonnade floor, is occupied as follows:—

The Treasurer of the United States in the centre building;*

The First Auditor in the north wing;

The Attorney General and Solicitor of the Treasury in the south wing.

On the second floor, in the centre building, are the apartments of the Secretary of the Treasury and his suite.

In the south wing are those of the First Comptroller, and the Register of the Treasury, who occupies also a suite of rooms in the north wing, besides several on the first floor, south side.

The Library of the Treasury is also on the second floor, containing most of the public documents, and a few valuable miscellaneous works. The third floor is occupied entirely by the General

PATENT OFFICE.

This bureau now occupies its new fire-proof building, situated on F street north; between Seventh and Eighth street west, with its centre portico looking down Eighth street; the portion of the building now erected extends two hundred and seventy feet, by a depth of seventy feet, and two stories high above the basement.

The first or portico floor, is occupied by the Commissioner of Patents and his suite, at the east end; and the model room at the west end.

The second, or principal floor, will be occupied altogether as an exhibition room for home manufactures. This room is the largest in the United States, taken as a whole, being two hundred and sixty-four feet in length, sixty-three feet in width, and thirty feet high. It is ornamented with a quadruple row of massive stone columns, rising with their entablature twenty feet; above which spring a series of arches, which, covering the whole area, form a highly ornamental ceiling. In the center a grand barrel arch, of forty feet span, towers above the rest, pierced with an aperture thirteen feet in diameter, to admit light from above.

The basement story is occupied by office rooms, and a large room for full size models.

The principal entrance to this building is from the south, up a noble flight of granite steps, and through a magnificent portico of sixteen massive Doric columns, in double rows, into a spacious hall, at the end of which a double flight of marble steps lead to the grand exhibition room.
